The estimated demand supply gap of 55 M.T. in the terminal year of the Tenth Plan (2006-07) is likely to be met through import of coal (estimated at 34 M.T.) and also increasing the domestic coal production. The estimated demand supply gap by the end of the terminal year of the Eleventh Five Year Plan is also likely to be met by increased import of coal, increasing domestic production and also having an efficient demand management system in place.

Domestic coal production will be increased by initiating a number of steps which include among other things: (a) allotment of coal blocks to State Government and State Government Undertakings so as to enable them to mine coal commercially; (b) liberalising allotment of blocks even for purposes of washing and sale of washed coal; and (c) putting in place a system for premitting exploitation of small isolated patches which cannot be commercially mined by the public sector coal companies and which are not well connected by Railway.

The Ministry has also considered recommending reduction of import duty on imported non-coking coal so as to make available more imported coal to meet the gap between demand and supply.
